

Simon Carley

Simon is a Consultant in Emergency Medicine at Manchester Royal Infirmary and Royal Manchester Children's Hospital. He is also works as a HEMS consultant with the North West Air Ambulance. He is a MAHSC Professor at the University of Manchester and a visiting Professor at Manchester Metropolitan University. He is currently the Dean of the Royal College of Emergency Medicine.

Simon has worked with ALSG since the very early days (initially acting as a patient one of the first ATLS courses in the UK). He has instructed on, and directed courses for MIMMS/HMIMMS/APLS & GIC. Simon has extensive experience in medical education, major incident management, trauma care, and evidence-based medicine. He completed a PhD in Technology Enhanced Medical Education and is lead editor of the internationally recognised St Emlyn's blog and podcast.

Simon lives in Manchester and enjoys watching and supporting his family do amazing things in their lives.